

Workshops to Discuss Water Reform Options

The Government is reviewing the framework within which three waters services are regulated and delivered. In-principle, decisions by Cabinet are expected in October.

Water New Zealand believes that it's important that you are kept up to date with what has been happening and have your opportunity to tell us what you think.

Starting late July Water New Zealand staff will be running a series of 14 consultation workshops throughout New Zealand. We will be focusing on the structure and functions we believe a new drinking water regulator should have; and we will be discussing the various reform options for water delivery available to the Government. You may also wish to raise a range of other issues with us.

We'd like to hear your views so we can formulate a position on water regulation and delivery options that we'd like Government to consider. This work will lead to us eventually tabling a written submission with Department of Internal Affairs officials sometime mid-September.

The dates of these workshops are listed at right. Visit our Water New Zealand website to book early and secure a seat. www.waternz.org.nz/news/eventscalendar

Venues are still being confirmed, but you will be advised of these shortly after you register. John Pfahlert, Noel Roberts and Jim Graham will be making the presentations and looking for feedback.
