Water in New Zealand has been under the microscope in recent years and with the development of strategies and implementation plans across central and local government, questions are being raised over what this means for Auckland's water?

We have assembled a panel of specialists to discuss the issues around improving Auckland's water quality. Our panel includes representatives from the Ministry for the Environment, Auckland Council's Healthy Waters Department, Watercare, Water New Zealand and Auckland Transport.

Join our panellists as they discuss the intricacies of these strategies and how they will ultimately benefit Auckland's water.
